CRANNIS and KEMP'S PATENT.—The specimen of WOOD PAVING which created so much admiration at the Great Exhibition and the Polytechnic, can be seen at the office of the undersigned from Two to Four o'clock, on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays. The recent relaying of Cornhill-street proves that where wealth and intelligence prevail a great public benefit will not have to give way to clamour. That pavement is beautiful, but the dearer literature is wanting, that of science of adjustment; this is to be seen here, combined with other very obvious improvements. It is intended to form a Company to work out this patent; in the meantime an inspection is desired previous to the authorities being requested to submit a great specimen to be exhibited and tried.

Price delivered in the Thames from £1 to £1 per foot cube according to dimensions. This celebrated stone is well known for its strength and durability, having been selected by the eminent engineers, the late Mr. Rennie and Mr. Telford, and found to be superior to any other stone where strength was required, and was constantly specified by them in those works for which they were engineers, and which are too numerous to mention. J. W. does feel it to caution the public against the parties who advertise Bramley Fall Stone, but who sell for Bramley Fall any other inferior and perishable stone.—All orders and communications addressed to Messrs. In price it is far below the cost of any natural product, and in many cases can be furnished as low as ordinary cement. Copies of Busts, Statuary, or other Works of Art, may be produced in the finest Parian stone so faithfully as to Please the Eye.
